

College Works Painting Reference Letter
Maria Bates, PhD
Patrick Colmenar, TO
6201 Winnetka Avenue
Woodland Hills
California 91371

We enthusiastically commend David Taylor for his outstanding service as the Branch Operator of College Works. When we initially learned about the program through David's marketing materials, we were hesitant about whether he could fulfill his pledge since he was acting as a first-time intern and had to fulfill a multitude of challenging tasks.

Pierce College

June 24, 2009

To Whom It May Concern:

We enthusiastically commend David Taylor for his outstanding service as the Branch Operator of College Works. When we initially learned about the program through David's marketing materials, we were hesitant about whether he could fulfill his pledge since he was acting as a first-time intern and had to fulfill a multitude of challenging tasks. However, from the very beginning, David not only put our fears to rest, but he exceeded our expectations.

Part of what makes David an exceptional leader is his commitment to quality work and his superlative interpersonal skills. Not only did he market college works, but he had to meet with us for several hours to earn our business. During this consultation, David impressed us with his thorough knowledge of the venture, from the beginning of a task to its fruition. He estimated the costs for materials, created a labor and schedule plan, and made sure that his crew adhered to their agreement. Moreover and perhaps even more unexpectedly, he led by producing; he was not only on-site to supervise his workers, but he also helped them in order to maintain the schedule. Sometimes, he had his labor plan in one hand and paint on his other hand; and yet, throughout the entire process, he maintained a courteous disposition, answering any questions we had. Simply put, David is an utterly responsible, highly skilled leader. It was obvious that his crew respected him and he definitely earned our respect.

We should also note that my husband has run his own successful internet business and understands the kind of individual who would be a significant, unparalleled contributor to a team. David Taylor is such an individual; he knows how to market, plan, and get the job completed, all the while having an extra special something, a charisma, that makes him stand out from the crowd.

We commend him with the highest regard and anticipate his success in whatever endeavors he chooses to pursue.

Maria Bates, PhD

Patrick Colmenar, TO

6201 Winnetka Avenue/ Woodland Hills/ California/ 91371/(818)

PIERCE COLLEGE

June 24, 2009

To Whom It May Concern:

We enthusiastically commend David Taylor for his outstanding service as the Branch Operator of College Works. When we initially learned about the program through David's marketing materials, we were hesitant about whether he could fulfill his pledge since he was acting as a first-time intern and had to fulfill a multitude of challenging tasks. However, from the very beginning, David not only put our fears to rest, but he exceeded our expectations.

Part of what makes David an exceptional leader is his commitment to quality work and his superlative interpersonal skills. Not only did he market College Works, but he had to meet with us for several hours to earn our business. During this consultation, David impressed us with his through knowledge of the venture, from the beginning of a task to its fruition. He estimated the costs for materials, created a labor and schedule plan, and made sure that his crew adhered to their agreement. Moreover and perhaps even more unexpectedly, he led by producing; he was not only on-site to supervise his workers, but he also helped them in order to maintain the schedule. Sometimes, he had his labor plan in one hand and paint on his other hand; and yet, throughout the entire process, he maintained a courteous disposition, answering any questions we had. Simply put, David is an utterly responsible, highly skilled leader. It was obvious that his crew respected him and he definitely earned our respect.

We should also note that my husband has run his own successful internet business and understands the kind of individual who would be a significant, unparalleled contributor to a team. David Taylor is such an individual; he knows how to market, plan, and get the job completed, all the while having an extra special something, a charisma, that makes him stand out from the crowd.

We commend him with the highest regard and anticipate his success in whatever endeavors he chooses to pursue.

Maria Bates, PhD

Patrick Colmenar, CTO

6201 Winnetka Avenue/ Woodland Hills/ California/ 91371/ (818)
