

College Works Painting Reference Letter
Eric Wilson
1319 Pearl Street
Santa Monica, CA 90405
Tel 310.452.3452
EricSantaMonica@gmail.com

I should like to write a letter detailing my experience in hiring College Works to paint my house. When Laurence Hall initially came by to explain their services and give a bid, I was impressed by his professional bearing and knowledge of what the project would entail. I agreed to hire them and a date was set.

12 July 2010

To Whom It May Concern:

I should like to write a letter detailing my experience in hiring College Works to paint my house. When Laurence Hall initially came by to explain their services and give a bid, I was impressed by his professional bearing and knowledge of what the project would entail. I agreed to hire them and a date was set.

A few days before the power-wash, Laurence and his fellow manager Richard Odierno came by to go over the preparations one final time. We found we needed to prune back even more of the bushes abutting the wall, so there was ample time to have this done before they started work.

Laurence and Richard were on-site as the project began and even pitched in themselves in doing some of the work. They wanted to make certain everything would go smoothly.

As it turned out their crew, David Murdock and Andrew McKenzie, had both already had a number of years' experience in the field as painters and construction workers. They were clearly on a professional level.

Now that the job has been completed, I can say that there were no negative surprises whatsoever. All the young men involved were highly intelligent and thoughtful. They were sensitive to my special requests and the fact that I work out of the house.

For the wooden beams and posts on the front porch, they were able to apply a “hot mud” to smooth out all the imperfections, so that the painted wood looked like new.

During the entire project, they were considerate, pleasant to have around, and conscientious. They were fastidious in cleaning up and left the premises in perfect condition.

Initially I had felt that I might be taking a chance in hiring students, but I discovered that the work they provided was on a level with the best of seasoned professionals. And again, their being so intelligent and thoughtful added to my satisfaction with the work they turned in and the experience of having them around.

I would give them the highest possible recommendation. If you are thinking about hiring them, do not have any doubts. These guys are the “real deal.” You won’t be disappointed.

ERIC WILSON
1319 PEARL STREET
SANTA MONICA, CA 90405
TEL 310.452.3452
EricSantaMonica@gmail.com

12 July 2010

To Whom It May Concern:

I should like to write a letter detailing my experience in hiring College Works to paint my house. When Laurence Hall initially came by to explain their services and give a bid, I was impressed by his professional bearing and knowledge of what the project would entail. I agreed to hire them and a date was set.

A few days before the power-wash, Laurence and his fellow manager Richard Odierno came by to go over the preparations one final time. We found we needed to prune back even more of the bushes abutting the wall, so there was ample time to have this done before they started work.

Laurence and Richard were on-site as the project began and even pitched in themselves in doing some of the work. They wanted to make certain everything would go smoothly.

As it turned out their crew, David Murdock and Andrew McKenzie, had both already had a number of years' experience in the field as painters and construction workers. They were clearly on a professional level.

Now that the job has been completed, I can say that there were no negative surprises whatsoever. All the young men involved were highly intelligent and thoughtful. They were sensitive to my special requests and the fact that I work out of the house.

For the wooden beams and posts on the front porch, they were able to apply a "hot mud" to smooth out all the imperfections, so that the painted wood looked like new.

During the entire project, they were considerate, pleasant to have around, and conscientious. They were fastidious in cleaning up and left the premises in perfect condition.

Initially I had felt that I might be taking a chance in hiring students, but I discovered that the work they provided was on a level with the best of seasoned professionals. And again, their being so intelligent and thoughtful added to my satisfaction with the work they turned in and the experience of having them around.

I would give them the highest possible recommendation. If you are thinking about hiring them, do not have any doubts. These guys are the "real deal." You won't be disappointed.