

College Works Painting Reference Letter
Amy Palatnick

Against all odds, the boys actually got our old house painted this week.

Against all odds, the boys actually got our old house painted this week.

Several work days were over 100 degrees. The house itself is falling apart (shingles rotting, random wires sticking out of the house, gutters improperly attached...). There are nooks and crannies that needed to be painted that would never be seen under other circumstances.

Winslow was excellent about communication from the start. Always friendly and understanding, it was clear that it was a priority for him that we were satisfied with the job. Andrew was a smiling work-horse and went WAY beyond the call of duty to keep our house in one piece and get it painted at the same time, blurring the lines between painting and carpentry. He, too, was great about communicating with us throughout the job. Tim was sweet, quiet and hard-working. The whole crew was really easy to be around, and have here in our space, with our animals, children, and friends.

What I have appreciated most about this job is the openness of the entire crew to listening to our requests, and their commitment to completing the job to our standards. There were never any questions—if we asked them to do something, they jumped on the ladder with a smile and went to it, just like that. There was a warmth and openness that made having the house painted a real joy. Plus, it looks GREAT!!

Amy Palatnick

Against all odds, the boys actually got our old house painted this week.

Several work days were over 100 degrees. The house itself is falling apart (shingles rotting, random wires sticking out of the house, gutters improperly attached...). There are nooks and crannies that needed to be painted that would never be seen under other circumstances.

Winslow was excellent about communication from the start. Always friendly and understanding, it was clear that it was a priority for him that we were satisfied with the job. Andrew was a smiling work-horse and went WAY beyond the call of duty to keep our house in one piece and get it painted at the same time, blurring the lines between painting and carpentry. He, too, was great about communicating with us throughout the job. Tim was sweet, quiet and hard-working. The whole crew was really easy to be around, and have here in our space, with our animals, children, and friends.

What I have appreciated most about this job is the openness of the entire crew to listening to our requests, and their commitment to completing the job to our standards. There were never any questions—if we asked them to do something, they jumped on the ladder with a smile and went to it, just like that. There was a warmth and openness that made having the house painted a real joy. Plus, it looks GREAT!!

Amy Palatnick