

College Works Painting Reference Letter
Stephen Lewis

In August of 2010, a crew from College Works Painters arrived at my home to begin the task of painting the exterior of my home.

8/8/2010

To Whom It May Concern,

In August of 2010, a crew from College Works Painters arrived at my home to begin the task of painting the exterior of my home. The crew was led by Jesse whom I had met earlier in the summer to discuss and contract the job. Little did they know when they arrived that they would be plagued by bad weather and a demanding customer.

The first day of painting ended early with heavy rains, as did the second day. I know that this put them behind schedule, and I was concerned that they would now have to rush through the job. I was instead surprised to see the crew come back each day and resume their work at a reasonable pace without sacrificing any quality to get back on schedule.

Jesse and the crew were always very polite, neat, hard working, and willing to put in the extra effort to make sure I was satisfied with the job.

I am a perfectionist in everything I do and expect no less from those I hire to do work for me. I had painted my home myself a couple of times before hiring College Works painters, so I knew exactly what I wanted done – including some very intricate painting patterns on my front porch that added a little extra flare to the look of the house. The crew took the time to carefully replicate the work which put them a bit more behind in their schedule. I also had some severely weathered sections of cedar which they worked hard on to repair properly before painting to ensure the job would look good and last a long time.

I have to admit that I am hard to please, but Jesse made sure the crew understood my needs and they did a good job in satisfying them. I am pleased with the depth of Jesse's leadership, the crew's dedication to meeting my expectations, and the quality of their combined workmanship.

Sincerely,

Stephen Lewis

8/8/2010

To Whom It May Concern,

In August of 2010, a crew from College Works Painters arrived at my home to begin the task of painting the exterior of my home. The crew was led by Jesse whom I had met earlier in the summer to discuss and contract the job. Little did they know when they arrived that they would be plagued by bad weather and a demanding customer.

The first day of painting ended early with heavy rains, as did the second day. I know that this put them behind schedule, and I was concerned that they would now have to rush through the job. I was instead surprised to see the crew come back each day and resume their work at a reasonable pace without sacrificing any quality to get back on schedule.

Jesse and the crew were always very polite, neat, hard working, and willing to put in the extra effort to make sure I was satisfied with the job.

I am a perfectionist in everything I do and expect no less from those I hire to do work for me. I had painted my home myself a couple of times before hiring College Works Painters, so I knew exactly what I wanted done – including some very intricate painting patterns on my front porch that added a little extra flare to the look of the house. The crew took the time to carefully replicate the work which put them a bit more behind in their schedule. I also had some severely weathered sections of cedar which they worked hard on to repair properly before painting to ensure the job would look good and last a long time.

I have to admit that I am hard to please, but Jesse made sure the crew understood my needs and they did a good job in satisfying them. I am pleased with the depth of Jesse's leadership, the crew's dedication to meeting my expectations, and the quality of their combined workmanship.

Sincerely,